

think twice

ecological sustainability in project management

future only comes once!

How green is the management of your project? - What do you consider when you organise training sessions or events? Or what kind of marketing and dissemination materials do you use for your project? How do you travel for a project?

With the Think Twice! project, implemented under the Erasmus+ programme, we want to encourage you to think twice about your day-to-day activities in managing (not only) European funded projects and the impact they might have on the environment.

Achieving sustainability of business activities, intertwining social, economic and environmental perspectives, is one of the most challenging objectives for organisations and companies all over the world. What sometimes seems like a daunting and overwhelming mission can also be approached starting with small steps. Therefore, to support project managers across Europe, the Think Twice! project is here to share knowledge, experience and good practice examples of working and managing projects in a more ecologically sustainable way.

Take the first step towards learning more today!

The Think Twice! project has two main results for you:

Curated Treasury of good practices in ecologically sustainable project management

A collection of good practice examples will inspire you to find solutions within your own organisation and provide you with enough information for you to make conscious decisions.

Stress Test of current practice leading to a personalised Learning Pathway

You can examine your own work with this Stress Test and then undertake some bite-size learning towards a more ecologically sustainable project management.

Who is this project aimed at?

If you are:

- a new or experienced project manager working or wanting to work in European funded projects
- project-based organisations and companies
- VET providers
- training institutions offering further education for project managers
- volunteers in NGOs

this project is for you. You did not find yourself among the direct target groups mentioned above? If you are interested in the topic of project management and sustainability, you are most welcome to have a look at the free materials and let us know how they can be of benefit to you.

Why should you Think Twice?

- Ecological sustainability is already becoming a guiding principle not only for the management, but all aspects of European projects
- There is an increasing interest in developing and providing new managerial practices for project management, focusing on sustainability and green management

Partnership consists of 8 partners from Germany, Portugal, Spain, Italy, Greece, Cyprus, Slovenia & UK.
